Alette Matthews

Valedictorian

Ryan Arena Editor
ryana@heraldguide.com

Alette Matthews has had a fascination with space as long as she can remember.

The valedictorian of Hahnville High School’s Class of 2022 will be attending Smith College in Massachusetts to major in astrophysics, and she said whether it puts her on the road to NASA, SpaceX or independent research, she’s eager to start pushing toward her goals.

“I used to want to be an astronaut like every kid does,” Matthews said. “By fifth grade, I wanted to be an astronomer. By middle school, I figured out physics was kind of where I was at.

“I’ve always really liked space and interested in understanding workings involved with it, and I’ve always been really good at math,” Matthews said. “I wanted to do something with that. Astrophysics is a field centered around learning, understanding more about it and more about the world. And I really love learning ... this is something I can learn from for the rest of my life.”

Matthews has been active through her time at Hahnville, not just through her studies but also in her extracurricular involvement. She was a member of Beta Club, National Honor Society and the National Art Honor Society, the latter she said helped well with her involvement in the talented art program.

“It was a really good way to express my creativity and to do community service,” Matthews said.

She was also in the creative writing club and Interact. She’s volunteered with Toys for Tots and at the Alligator Festival. Matthews is also very involved in the New Life Community Church

Brody Cancienne

Salutatorian

Ryan Arena Editor
ryana@heraldguide.com

Brody Cancienne’s journey to becoming salutatorian of Hahnville High’s Class of 2022 did indeed come on the back of much study work outside the classroom. But an emphasis on being an active participant in the classroom is what he believes his success is truly rooted from.

“I did put a lot of focus on staying dedicated and doing homework, but being diligent in the classroom is so important,” Cancienne said. “Making sure you understand the material, and if you don’t understand something, asking for help, from your peers or the teachers themselves.

“It’s just one of the ways I’ve found that helps me understand information, just being active. Even if I’m not called on, I’m thinking about what’s going on, and what my answer to the question would be.”

Cancienne called the news of the honor “pretty surprising,” though he knew he was in the running – it was a tight race, he said, with several other strong contenders alongside him in the senior class.

“There were a lot of pretty smart people in my class, so while I knew my GPA was good, I knew it was close. I think it was a little more satisfying to hear because it was kind of surprising and out of the blue,” Cancienne said.

He received the news via a phone call from Hahnville Principal Jose Gonzales, who at first called under the guise of addressing a technical problem.

“He said, ‘Hey, we’re having some problems with your Chromebook,’” Cancienne recalled. “So, he starts asking me some questions from there and

HHS grad’s faith drives him in the right direction

Ryan Arena Editor
ryana@heraldguide.com

Charles Looney fondly recalls a recent trip to Mobile, Ala. with fellow members of First Baptist Church in Luling, and the good they were able to do for a local worship camp there.

“We all came together to help bring this camp back on its feet,” Looney said. “Clearing out the downed trees, cleaning up the pond and clearing the roadways, so they can start bringing the kids back and help them grow and learn about Christ.”

Looney’s faith guides him in his day-to-day life, the chief reason the Hahnville graduate plans to attend Mississippi College to major in worship leadership.

That area of study allows him to combine two of his passions. Looney has been a member of the HHS marching band, for which he plays bass drum. His major-to-be at Mississippi College entails a music program that teaches students how to lead worship in a church. In part through playing drums and/or guitar and singing.

Ultimately, he would like to go straight into ministry after college, possibly as a youth pastor.

“Actually, I started thinking about doing that at the beginning of my senior year,” Looney said. “It started coming to me in pieces. I feel strong in my faith ... I think it’s a calling.”

He said his time with the band at Hahnville will be among his fondest memories, be it playing on Friday nights for Hahnville football games – particularly the road trips with his band mates – as well as going to different festivals.

Another group he enjoyed taking part in was the ROTC, especially the drill competitions. In his senior year, he reached the status of group commander. He was also a three-year member of Beta Club and four-year member of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. Also athletically, he was a member of the Tigers’ cross country and track and field teams.

But most of all, the bonds he formed with his friends and classmates were what will be most lasting, he said. The past few years have been anything but normal for the Class of 2022. But while minutes spent together inside classroom walls were limited at times due to COVID-19 and Hurricane Ida, leaning on one another to battle through that adversity brought students together, Looney said.

He added another difficult time for the members of his class, the death of Hahnville student Ashton Flair in 2020.

“We lost one of our best friends,” Looney said. “That was really difficult for us, and we all became closer through dealing with that.”

HHS grad stars on stage, loves the lab

Ryan Arena Editor
ryana@heraldguide.com

Anahja Hickerson took interest in biology and chemistry as she ascended through the grade levels at her schools, something that’s guided her as she looks to soon begin pursuit of a pre-med degree at Xavier University.

The more the Hahnville graduate dug into the idea, the more excited she became about it.

“I’m interested in anatomy, and I just really like the idea of being able to help people through their medical issues,”

Hickerson said. “To be able to diagnose what is going on and get someone back to health.”

Hickerson’s goals in the medical field are just one aspect of a well-rounded student and person that has quite the creative side. A talented theatre student since the third grade, she’s been part of performances both on the stage and behind the scenes. Her first love, she says, will always be the former role – being an actress.

“I love to act ... I love being on stage,” Hickerson said. “Playing a part, that experience of becoming somebody else for an hour-and-a-half. Especially when you’re able to touch the audience, whether it’s a comedic show or a dramatic show, hearing the audience reacting is an amazing feeling. That’s why I love it.”

She’s also starred a bit on the small screen as part of two commercials.

Matilda ranks as her favorite stage show to be a part of, as she’s long been a fan of musicals.

She kept quite busy in other areas. She was a member of the Superintendent’s Advisory Council, the President of the National Honor Society and a member of the Beta Club.

Before arriving at Hahnville, Hickerson was a two-time Student of the Year, first at Luling Elementary and then at R.K. Smith Middle School.

Once at Hahnville, she and her classmates were met with hurdle upon hurdle, an unprecedented run of disturbances to their school fare – first by COVID-19 and then by Hurricane Ida. Hickerson admitted that was difficult for her.

“COVID definitely taught me the importance of being in a classroom when it comes to learning,” she said. “While we were doing hybrid days, I found it very hard to keep up when there’s just me and my Chromebook. I really learned the value of being there at school and in the classroom.”

Whether she was in the classroom or at home on a daily basis, she credits her mother for guiding her and keeping her focused.

“She’s very inspirational to me,” Hickerson said. “She keeps me pushing for my goals, especially career wise. Whenever I’m stressed out or struggling to find the motivation to keep going, she reminds me of why I need to keep doing what I do.”

Hickerson is also a junior youth leader at Mount Zion Missionary Baptist Church, helping to plan community events and programs like talent shows and fitness days.

She naturally takes on leadership roles, and has for some time.

“Since I was in elementary school, really,” she said. “I learned if you want to be successful, you can’t just make the grades. You have to have a great personality. You have to be able to lead and to help others achieve. That’s why I’ve always kind of gravitated to those leadership roles.”

Grad who introduced new activities urges students to get the most out of high school

Monique Roth Editor
moniquer@heraldguide.com

As Lily Dalon sets her sights on college, the 2022 Hahnville High School graduate said she feels like she squeezed everything she could out of high school. She encourages others to do the same.

“My advice to kids starting high school would be to enjoy every moment and participate in everything you can,” she said. “It flies by extremely quickly and the best feeling is knowing that you took every opportunity you could have and didn’t miss out on any event or activity. Every football game, school dance, award ceremony ... is a memory that is worth making.”

Dalon, the daughter of Kelly and Christopher Dalon, was a part of many clubs and extra-curriculars at HHS. She was a student section leader, walked on the 2022 senior homecoming court, was involved with Beta Club and the National Honor Society and served on the student council throughout high school. She was the junior and senior class president, and as a freshman and sophomore she played tennis. Dalon has been in talented theater since her elementary school days at Mimosa, and outside of school she has been a volunteer for the Dat Dads Club of Luling.

Dalon is graduating from HHS with a 4.2 GPA and will start Southeastern Louisiana University in the fall with 20 hours already under her belt thanks to dual enrollment credits. She plans to study human resource

HHS dancer named most likely to impact world by peers

Monique Roth Editor
moniquer@heraldguide.com

Mona'e Gordon has a passion for performing, and the 2022 Hahnville High School graduate found several stages for that hobby to be displayed on during her four years of high school.

Gordon was a cheerleader during her freshman year and then switched to dance team for the next three years of high school. During her junior year Gordon served as co-captain of the dance team, and she was the captain of the team during her senior year.

"I loved Friday nights, especially during the alma matter and our half time performance," she said. "I absolutely love to perform ... I used to do pageants heavily too. My mom would say I would go out there and own the stage ... I'm not shy when it comes to that."

Gordon was on the homecoming court her senior year and was voted by her peers as the "Most Likely to Impact the World." She was chosen as prom queen and Miss HHS, served on the student council her freshman and senior year and was a member of the Superintendent's Student Advisory Board, Interact Club, National Honor Society and Beta Club.

Gordon also participated in Louisiana Girls State. She will graduate from HHS with a 4.3 GPA.

Gordon said she may investigate ways to extend her dancing career at Louisiana State University, but for at

Football star hopes he’s remembered for kindness

Monique Roth Editor
moniquer@heraldguide.com

Christopher Scott may have found success on the high school football field, but he said that’s not the thing he wants to be remembered for.

“Even though I played sports, what mattered most to me is that I was kind and that I impacted somebody’s day by being nice,” he said. “That’s the most important thing ... kindness. If I left there and nobody could say they looked up to me or that I didn’t impact someone or pave the way for them ... then I didn’t do my job as a teammate.”

Scott, a Boutte resident, is a 2022 Hahnville High School graduate headed to the University of Louisiana at Lafayette this fall. He plans to study kinesiology and has signed on to play football at the university.

At HHS he was a part of the football team for four years and was even called up by the high school as a J.B Martin student to participate in spring ball his 8th grade year. Ever since fifth grade Scott has been a part of the school district’s talented theatre program, and this year he joined a new group of young men at HHS who would meet once a week to talk about their problems or concerns.

Scott said one of the things that he’s most proud of is that he’s served as a deacon since he was a young child, and that he has also been a part of church choirs.

“I always kept God first in my life,” he said. “Without Him I wouldn’t be where I’m at today ... I wouldn’t have community, where she and others do outreach work.

“Honestly, I don’t know where it comes from, it’s just something I feel like I should do – help other people,” said Matthews of those busy efforts. “I think to be part of the community, a part of a group of people is really important.”

Matthews indicated some might be surprised to learn she’s headed to Smith to study astrophysics, because she is often associated with another one of her passions: art.

“People would ask my parents if I’m going to school for art,” she said. “I’ve always been really into that.”

One of her portraits is on display at the Lafon Center as part of the Superintendent’s Gallery.

Learning she had earned the distinction of valedictorian was something she called one of her proudest moments. It was something she set her sights on before ever arriving at Hahnville, and she put in the work necessary to achieve her goal.

“I just kind of decided I wanted to go for valedictorian, when I was in middle school and getting ready for high school,” Matthews said. “I scheduled all of my classes around that idea of getting the best GPA ... I took most, if not all of the AP classes at school. And I had a lot of help from my teachers. I had really good relationships with all of them ... we were really close.”

That said, it wasn’t easy. Matthews admits she doesn’t deal well with sudden changes, and there were many of those for this senior class over the past three years thanks to COVID-19 and Hurricane Ida.

“That was definitely hard,” she said. “I think the last few years hit all of us like a bus. I just kept my eyes on my goals, kept doing what I was doing. I tried to keep good lines of communication with my teachers and staying a part of the school community ... staying connected with my friends, my family, and surrounding myself with positivity. I don’t deal well with change, and that was a lot of change, but I had to stick through it.”

eventually, he gets to, ‘How’s your public speaking?’ And I realize, oh, I think I know what this is about.”

Cancienne will be heading to the University of Louisiana-Lafayette to major in finance, a degree he feels will give him a number of different avenues to reach his ultimate goals.

“I just got really interested in (studying finance), how to make different types of investments ... it seems like it would be a useful skill to have,” he said. “I think I’m more of a numbers and logical kind of thinker, so it’s a good fit. I also definitely have a creative side to me, but even in that English or foreign language kind of class, I try to compartmentalize things in a numbers kind of way.”

For Cancienne, Hahnville will always bring back memories of the relationships he’s made, be it with friends or mentors.

“I feel like each person that I’ve met really shaped me in their own specific way,” Cancienne said.

Cancienne was a member of the National Honor Society and the Beta Club during his time at Hahnville.

He was also a member of the golf team, which he joined prior to his sophomore year.

“My dad played golf a lot, and it became a pretty good hobby for me,” he said. “I like it because it’s so challenging, not just physically, but mentally as well. That really appeals to me.”

LOONEY from 10A

Looney is a member of the Civil Air Patrol, a group auxiliary to the Air Force, after joining five years ago. A deputy first lieutenant and cadet commander with the group, he says one of its responsibilities is to effectively join the ranks of first responders in certain emergency situations.

“To go out and look for people if there’s a capsized boat or a downed aircraft,” Looney said. “(It’s an organization) I like being a part of, it gives you the chance to lead and to teaches others how to lead. And to be a first responder, that’s something I like, knowing I can benefit someone and help people when they’re in need.”

least her freshman year she will focus on ways to get involved in student government, sorority life and volunteering there. She will major in kinesiology.

Gordon will start LSU ahead of the game thanks to college credits she earned as an AP scholar at HHS. And while she’s excited for her next educational adventure, she said she knows she’ll miss high school.

“My favorite things were the teachers and the environment,” she said of HHS, adding that her teachers went above and beyond during the especially hard times of the pandemic and Hurricane Ida. “I always felt really heard there and welcome, and I always felt like they wanted the best for me. It’s kind of bittersweet. I’m definitely going to miss high school.”

Gordon said the best advice she can give anyone starting high school is to speak up for yourself.

“When you’re in a bigger pool of students you need to make sure you’re being heard,” she said. “Take advantage of all the opportunities that the school has to offer ... and just enjoy the moment and don’t try to rush it because it’ll be over before you know it.”

Scott said he chose UL for it’s homey environment.

“The coaches really showed a lot of love,” he said. “They showed me that they really cared about me as a person and not just what I can do on the football field.”

And while he’s excited about college, Scott said he knows that he’ll miss high school.

“I’m sad to leave high school because I know I’ll miss it,” he said. “I’ve been seeing my teammates practice ... I know I’ll miss it. I’m excited about college and nervous at the same time, but I feel like once I get there I’ll get in a groove.”

management.

New to HHS this year was the senior sunrise and sunset, in which Dalon was instrumental in planning.

“It was the start and finish of our senior year,” she said. “In the fall we all came early to watch the sun rise, and then we just had our sunset night where we watched the sunset on the football field and had a recap video of senior years ... tears were definitely happening at that.”

Another new senior event that Dalon helped to plan was the senior walk, where seniors dressed in their caps and gowns and walked the halls of their elementary school buildings.

“That was really sentimental and special,” she said.

Dalon said she hopes the new senior events become traditions at HHS.

“I really embraced my four years at Hahnville,” she said. “I felt like I had an impact and was able to have a voice there. I hope my peers remember me to be kind, personable, a great leader and someone that could bring a smile to their face. I hope that they remember me to be that helpful, trusted person they can always come to.”

DHS, Karr brought eyes for scrimmage

Ryan Arena Editor
ryana@heraldguide.com

The atmosphere at Wildcat Stadium Tuesday night exceeded what one usually finds during spring game fare: two of the state's most talented – and dominant – football teams went out to test in the semifinals or the championship game, and it's great for us to get to play that kind of team right now," Eugene said. "We prepared for it like we would a semifinal kind of game."

Both teams posted a touchdown early during

"It was just a great atmosphere. We were ready to play, and knowing Karr was gonna come out and play hard too ... people want to see good guys go at it."

— DHS QB Jai Eugene

one another as Destrehan hosted Karr for scrimmage action.

There was a big crowd in attendance to see it, and the sidelines popped with the colors of several major collegiate football programs, as numerous coaches and scouts were out to see the teams in action. Both Destrehan and Karr boast several strong recruits – both under and upperclassmen.

"It was just a great atmosphere," said Destrehan quarterback Jai Eugene, among the most sought-after players at the next level. "We were ready to play, and knowing Karr was gonna come out and play hard too ... people want to see good guys go at it. That's all it was."

The Wildcats have been to one state final and two state semifinals over the past three years of Eugene and this senior class. Karr, meanwhile, has been to a whopping five straight state championship games in Class 4A and won four championships over that span. The Cougars are making the move up to Class 5A this season, and it doesn't take a wild imagination to envision another meeting between these two teams before 2022 is done.

"They're moving to Class 5A ... they're always the situational play portion of the scrimmage. Destrehan struck first when Eugene connected with running back Trey Nixon on a screen pass for a 21-yard touchdown. Nixon set his team up in scoring range earlier in the drive with an explosive run of more than 30 yards.

Karr passer A.J. Samuel answered after leading his team on a 70-yard drive, one capped off by his 3-yard plunge into the endzone.

The defenses took this personally. The remainder of that portion of scrimmage was largely controlled by each side's stop unit.

"We've got a whole new front," said DHS linebacker Kolaj Cobbins, who has garnered major Division I attention even before the start of his upcoming junior year. "All of the seniors that left from the previous year on the line ... with that in mind, we had to step up. And our defensive backs, those guys are leaders out here. They keep the flow going. But we definitely still have more to work on for sure."

Destrehan nearly punched in another score after a 22-yard run by Eugene set the Wildcats up inside the 10, but Karr soon forced a fumble near the goalline to stop the threat.

Prior to that, DHS wide receiver Makylon Smothers began turning heads with one of a few splash plays on the night – a 30-plus yard reception from Eugene saw Smothers leap up and extend for the ball and hold on through contact.

"He's a sophomore, and he's a backup right now – Leslie Jefferson was out for us," said Destrehan head coach Marcus Scott. "But he's a guy with unlimited potential."

A promising Karr drive was denied points, in part, due to a big pass breakup by DHS defensive back Anthony Robinson.

Destrehan added a second touchdown with the second teams on the field, as DuQuan Dabney shook loose downfield and hauled in a touchdown pass from Christian Nunnery.

In the redzone portion of the scrimmage, Eugene connected with Smothers for a 13-yard touchdown.

That was, in part, due to a clutch goalline stop by Destrehan that saw the Wildcats force a turnover on downs at the 1. Shane Lee provided a big part of that effort when he made a key stop just before the goal line on third down.

Destrehan's starting running back, Lee got significant reps on defense in this game, and showed he could make an impact. It's a luxury the Wildcats can afford, Scott said, because of the team's wealth of talent at running back.

He also noted that Lee – a multi-sport star who already has two years of significant action under his belt entering his junior season this fall – once again has proven a quick study.

"He's a difference-maker," Scott said. "He practiced on defense one day. He went through some walk throughs, but as for actual reps, not many. It's just the kind of athlete he is."

LSU, Tulane, Nicholls, UL-Monroe, Grambling, Alabama, Texas and Southern Mississippi were just a few of the schools with presence on the sidelines for this one.

"That's great ... we want to be able to showcase our kids in front of the nation's best," Scott said. "And as you can see by the turnout, they're all out here. We had to have anywhere between 30 and 50 coaches here from all levels."

Cobbins said it made for an exciting day, but when it came to executing on the field, that had to be pushed to the side.

"The most important thing is to just keep cool and act like nobody is out there," Cobbins said. "We're playing a top program in the state in Karr. We played them and we put up a great fight."

“Business has been really good ... really good,” she said. “Overall it’s been really busy and we’ve been blessed.”

Jill said the couple decided to start selling the tackle, worms, night-crawlers and other new products after customers kept asking them to.

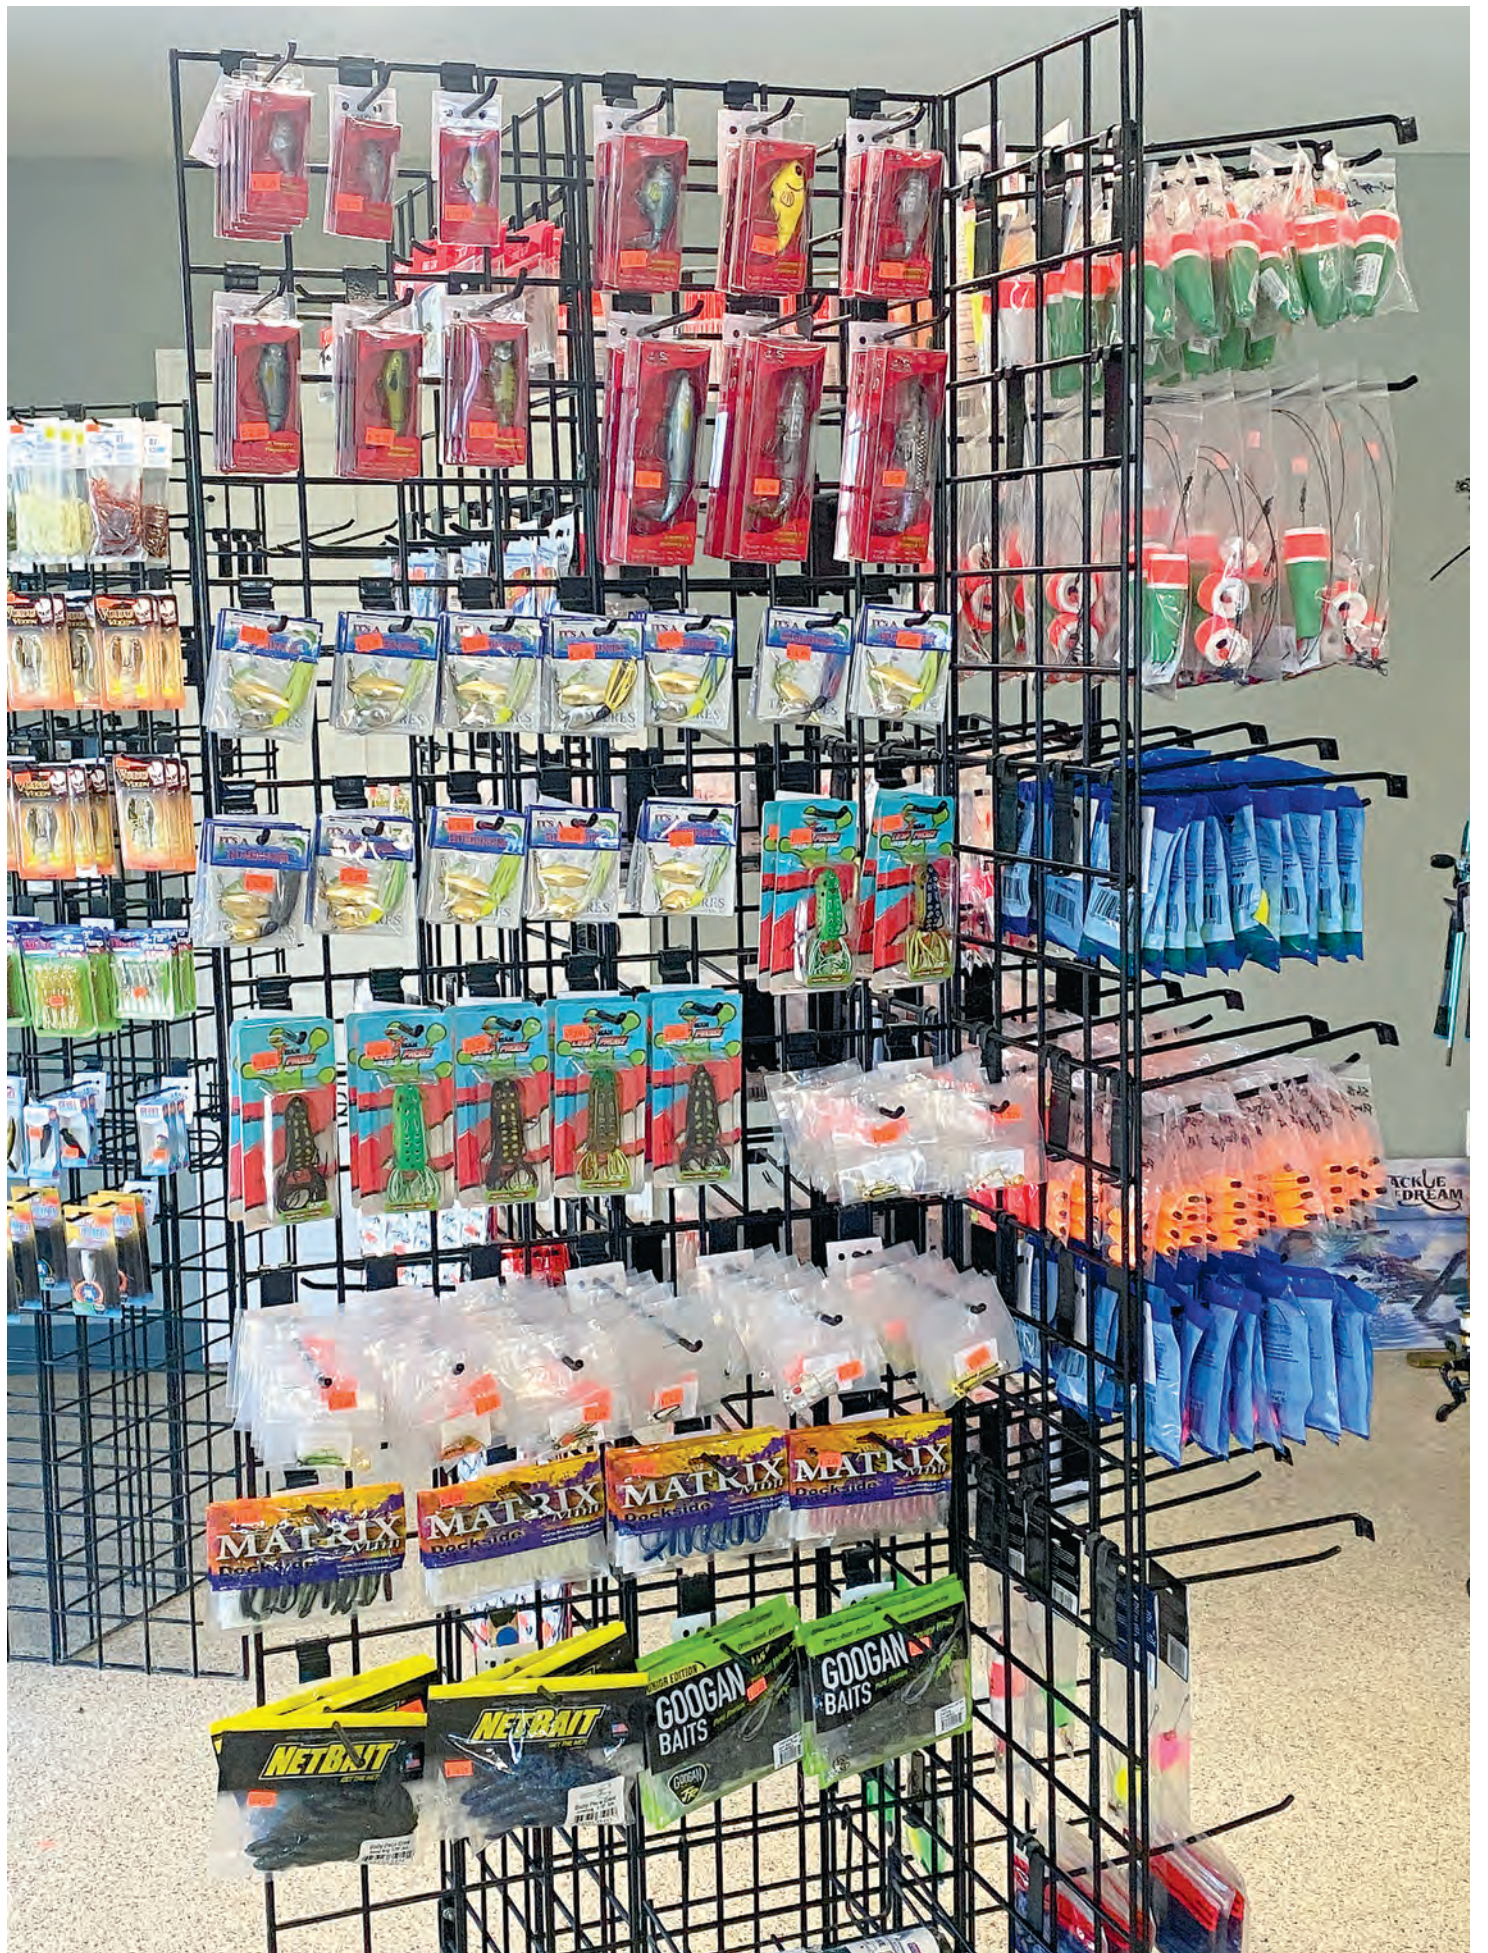

"We're using local tackle, so it's going to be all from local providers and anyone who does local baits," she said.

The business, located at 4428 Hwy 90 in Des Allemands, will have a grand opening on May 21 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. to celebrate the new offerings. Jill said the day will feature food, door prizes, music, tackle suppliers on site and more.

The shop has been a mainstay of the community for over 20 years. The goals of Landry's Outboard Motors & Repair Service are to help customers with the most quality service and repairs on Yamaha, Mercury, Johnson and Evinrude outboard motors, along with the right parts and accessories. Graduates should consider financial futures

As college graduates prepare to enter the workforce, First National Bank USA wants to remind them of the importance of planning for their financial future and preparing for what comes next.

“Venturing into adulthood and transitioning to the workforce for many can be a challenge for new graduates assuming more financial responsibilities,” said Brandt Dufrene, President at First National Bank USA. “Call on First National Bank USA as your trusted financial advisor to help you take stock of your finances and create a financial plan to reach your short- and long-term goals and help establish the right footing on the path to financial independence.

First National Bank USA offers the following strategies to help new graduates take control of their finances by making sound financial decisions during their wealth-building years to set them up for success through their major financial lifecycle events:

- Start a budget. Learn about our online services designed to help track and manage your finances.
- Pay off student loans. Creating a more aggressive repayment plan can save you thousands in the long run. Ask about programs to help pay off student debt when negotiating benefits with prospective employers.
- Plan for retirement. Automate your savings so that a portion of each paycheck goes directly into a savings account. Take advantage of your employers’ 401(k) plan and any matching contributions, if offered.
- Spend responsibly. Shopping and weekend getaways are a great way to recharge from the work week but can eat away at your budget. Do your research and comparison shop before making major purchases.

- Establish an emergency fund to cover life’s unexpected events. You can start small or with a lump sum and build from there. A good goal is three to six months of net pay.

“Developing and maintaining good financial habits provides a framework to build generational wealth and create a roadmap to help meet your financial goals and sustain you through life’s unexpected twists and turns,” said First National Bank USA President Brandt Dufrene. “First National Bank USA congratulates this year’s graduating class and encourage them to reach out to their local community banker to ensure a prosperous financial future.”
